

Tenured Associate Professor in English Language and Linguistics

The School of Communication and Culture at Aarhus University invites applications for the position of tenure-track assistant professor or tenured associate professor in English language and linguistics based at the Department of English.

The tenure-track assistant professorship begins with a full-time, fixed-term, five-year appointment as an assistant professor with a view to permanent employment as a tenured associate professor. See 'Tenure review and the tenure-track assistant professorship' below for information about attaining tenure.

The associate professorship is full-time and tenured.

Applicants must state the position (tenure-track assistant professor or tenured associate professor) for which they are applying. Applications in which this is not specified will not be considered.

The appointment begins on 1 January 2025 or as soon as possible thereafter. The School of Communication and Culture is committed to diversity and encourages all qualified applicants to apply regardless of their personal background.

The position

We are looking for a dedicated colleague with research and teaching experience in English syntax, semantics and pragmatics and in the history of the English language, who is qualified to teach the two obligatory courses English Language in Use: Practice and Theory (BA, International Business Communication in English) and English Linguistics 2 (BA, English), in particular the component History of English, and who will strengthen the research and teaching profiles of the department nationally and internationally.

The applicant should have research and/or teaching experience and qualifications relevant for the teaching of other obligatory language and linguistics courses on the BA and MA degree programmes in English and on the BA and MA degree programmes in International Business Communication in English and for the teaching of more specialised elective courses on the same four degree programmes. Therefore, in addition to English syntax, semantics and pragmatics and to the history of the English language, research and/or teaching experience in neighbouring subdisciplines will also be relevant, for example contrastive/comparative linguistics, conversation analysis, corpus linguistics, discourse analysis, first and second language acquisition, morphology, multimodality in texts, phonetics and phonology, and/or psycho- and neurolinguistics.

In sum, we are looking for an innovative and dedicated applicant who will enhance the research and teaching profiles of the department nationally and internationally as well as contributing to Aarhus University's core activities in research, teaching and supervision, talent development and knowledge exchange.

Research

The successful applicant will be expected to take a role in developing research in the field of English language and linguistics. The successful applicant will be expected to publish original peer-reviewed research internationally and make internationally recognised scholarly contributions to developments within English language and linguistics. The successful applicant will also be expected to contribute to the research community at the department in terms of new collaborative research projects with internal and external partners, with a view to securing external research funding. We welcome applicants who can bring novel approaches and methodologies to their research, pushing the boundaries of their respective fields.

Teaching and supervision

The position includes giving lectures in the two obligatory courses mentioned above, being the course coordinator for both courses and teaching at least one seminar group in each course. Responsibilities may also include teaching interdisciplinary courses for students at the Department of English and possibly for other students at the School of Communication and Culture.

The successful applicant will be expected to teach and supervise on the English department's BA, MA and PhD programmes, with the possibility of cross-departmental collaboration, and to apply innovative teaching methods and contribute to the ongoing development of degree programmes and curricula. In this connection, experience of degree programme and curriculum development at universities or similar institutions will be an advantage.

Application Deadline:
02 August 2024

Faculty:
Faculty of Arts

Institute/Faculty:
School of Communication and Culture

Academic contact person:
Peter Mortensen
Lektor
engpm@cc.au.dk
+4587162645

Vacant positions:
1

Hours per week:
37

Expected date of accession:
01/02/2025

All teaching at the Department of English is in English; therefore, applicants must have native or near-native command of English.

Please indicate in your application which courses you would be able to teach. The current academic regulations for the relevant BA and MA degree programmes are available here:

Bachelor's Degree Programme in English

Bachelor's Degree Programme in International Business Communication in English

Master's Degree Programme in English

Master's Degree Programme in International Business Communication in English

Tenure-track assistant professor

Teaching responsibilities include teaching and individual and group supervision at BA and MA levels. The successful applicant will be expected to participate in the curriculum development of the four BA and MA degree programmes mentioned above and to apply innovative teaching methods such as collaborative student involvement.

Tenured associate professor

We are looking for applicants with teaching and supervision experience in the field of English language and linguistics at university level.

In addition to the duties described in the case of the assistant professor, a successful applicant at the level of associate professor will be expected to take an active role in the ongoing development of the four BA and MA degree programmes mentioned above. In this connection, experience of degree programme and curriculum development at universities or similar institutions will be an advantage.

The successful applicant at the associate professor level will be expected to supervise and help develop the careers of early-career researchers, recruit and supervise PhD students, and participate in developing and implementing PhD courses within the field.

Finally, associate professors may be responsible for research, study programmes, course management, guidance and supervision, and academic assessment work. The university determines the exact weighting of the various responsibilities. The weighting of the responsibilities may vary over time.

Knowledge exchange

The successful applicant is expected to engage in knowledge exchange, for instance through research collaboration with private companies, government consultancy, civil society collaboration, and public dissemination of knowledge.

The successful applicant will have excellent opportunities to engage in relevant collaborative initiatives with partners inside and outside Aarhus University.

Qualifications

Tenure-track assistant professor

Applicants for the assistant professor position must have a PhD degree or document equivalent qualifications in a relevant field related to English language and linguistics as well as teaching and research experience equivalent to that attained through a PhD degree. Applicants for the position of assistant professor must be able to document relevant to the position:

- an internationally oriented research profile within English language and linguistics as documented by a PhD dissertation and/or research publications
- relevant teaching experience at university level, including innovative teaching methods.

Furthermore, it will be considered an advantage if applicants can document

- a track record of research publications of a high international standard, as commensurate with the length of the applicant's academic career
- an outstanding and innovative PhD dissertation in an area related to and relevant to English language and linguistics
- experience of participation in national and international research networks
- time spent abroad working at one or more internationally recognised research institutions.

Tenured associate professor

Applicants for the position of tenured associate professor must have a PhD degree or document equivalent qualifications in a relevant field related to English language and linguistics as well as teaching and research experience commensurate with that attained through an assistant professorship. Applicants must be able to document, relevant to the position:

- an internationally oriented research profile as documented by a solid international peer-reviewed research publication record within English language and linguistics
- experience of participation in international research projects as well as national and international research networks
- teaching and supervision competences and experience at BA and MA levels, including curriculum development
- experience of knowledge exchange
- completion of a teacher training programme designed for university teaching or an equivalent qualification
- experience of applying for external research funding.

Furthermore, it will be considered an advantage if applicants can document time spent abroad working at one or more internationally recognised research institutions. Finally, applicants at both levels are asked to provide thoughts and ideas outlining their research plans for the next five years and to state how they see themselves and the department contributing to future research developments within the English language and linguistics field, including their plans for publication, funding applications and collaborations with external partners.

Please note that although the application process can be completed on the Aarhus University system without uploading publications or a teaching portfolio, applications that do not include uploaded publications (maximum five for the tenure-track assistant professorship and maximum eight for the associate professorship) and a teaching portfolio (or equivalent documentation of teaching experience and qualifications) will not be considered.

Although the Aarhus University application system includes an option to upload letters of recommendation, please do not include letters of recommendation or references with the application. Applicants who are invited to an interview may be asked to provide references.

Tenure review and the tenure-track assistant professorship

To become tenured, the tenure-track assistant professor must be assessed as qualified as an associate professor during the last six months of the final year of employment at the latest or, if the tenure-track assistant professor requests it, at an earlier time within the first four years of employment. The assessment is based on the tenure-track assistant professor's fulfilment of the qualification requirements that apply to associate professorships and the criteria stated in the original advertisement. If the assessment is positive, the tenure-track assistant professor will be offered a tenured position as an associate professor at Aarhus University.

At the time of tenure review for the associate professor position, the tenure-track assistant professor is expected to have developed a robust research profile at a high international level and published the equivalent of at least two peer-reviewed scholarly articles per year. The tenure-track assistant professor is expected to have contributed actively to collaborative research and research initiatives with other local, national and/or international researchers. This includes having participated in attracting research funding from external funding bodies and having spent a period of research at one or more recognised research institutions.

At the time of tenure review for the position of associate professor, the tenure-track assistant professor must document the ability to undertake teaching tasks independently at all levels within their core subject area and document the breadth of their teaching competences at all levels, including supervision: they must have taught three to four courses a year, depending on the nature of the specific courses; they must have engaged in supervision activities such as thesis supervision at BA and/or MA level; and they must have conducted exams. The tenure-track assistant professor is also expected to have participated in curriculum development and contributed actively to the academic and research environment of the department. Lastly, the tenure-track assistant professor must have completed the university's teacher training programme for assistant professors prior to tenure review.

Work environment

Active participation in the daily life of the department is a high priority, and we emphasise the importance of good working relationships, both among colleagues and with our students. To maintain and develop the department's excellent teaching and research environment, the successful applicant is expected to be present at the department daily.

We respect the balance between work and private life and strive to create a work environment in which that balance can be maintained. You can read more about family and work-life balance in Denmark.

International applicants

International applicants are encouraged to read about the attractive working conditions and other benefits of working at Aarhus University and in Denmark, including healthcare, paid holidays and, if relevant, maternity/paternity leave, childcare and schooling. Aarhus University offers various services for international researchers and accompanying families, including a relocation service and an AU Expat Partner Programme. You can also find information about the taxation aspects of international researchers' employment by AU.

An appointee to the position of associate professor who does not speak Danish will be required to acquire proficiency in Danish sufficient to manage tasks, including administrative and managerial responsibilities and to participate fully in the activities of the School of Communication and Culture within approximately three years of commencing the appointment. These include, but are not limited to, reading work-related texts and taking part in meetings and collegial gatherings in Danish.

The tenure-track assistant professor must demonstrate proficiency in Danish at the time of the tenure review for the associate professor position. At this point, the tenure-track assistant professor must have achieved a level of Danish proficiency to be able to read work-related texts, handle administrative responsibilities and participate in meetings and collegial gatherings in Danish.

The department

The place of employment is the Department of English, which is located at Jens Chr. Skous Vej 4, 8000 Aarhus C, Denmark.

The Department of English is one of the largest and most international departments within the Faculty of Arts at Aarhus University, with approximately seventy researchers and lecturers from various countries. The Department of English has a strong international profile and a robust research network. The department prioritises research of the highest international standard and offers numerous opportunities for interdisciplinary research collaboration. Research and teaching at the department covers English language and linguistics, international business communication, English as a foreign and an international language, and the literature and social/historical/media studies of countries and regions in which English is the primary language.

Prospective applicants are invited to view the department's website.

School of Communication and Culture

The school is a part of the Faculty of Arts. You will find information about the school and its research programmes, departments and diverse activities on its website.

Contact

For further information about the position, please contact Peter Mortensen, Head of the Department of English, by e-mail: engpm@cc.au.dk.

If you need help uploading your application or have questions about the recruitment process, please contact Arts HR support by e-mail: hsi@au.dk.

Qualification requirements

Applicants should hold a PhD or equivalent academic qualifications.

Formalities

Faculty of Arts refers to the Ministerial Order on the Appointment of Academic Staff at Danish Universities (the Appointment Order).

- Appointment shall be in accordance with the collective labour agreement between the Danish Ministry of Taxation and the Danish Confederation of Professional Associations.
- Further information on qualification requirements and job content may be found in the Memorandum on Job Structure for Academic Staff at Danish Universities.

- Further information on the application and supplementary materials may be found in Application Guidelines.

The application must outline the applicant's motivation for applying for the position, attaching a curriculum vitae, a teaching portfolio, a complete list of published works, copies of degree certificates and no more than eight examples of academic production (mandatory). Please upload this material electronically along with your application.

If nothing else is noted, applications must be submitted in English. Application deadline is at 11.59 pm Danish time (same as Central European Time) on the deadline day.

Aarhus University's ambition is to be an attractive and inspiring workplace for all and to foster a culture in which each individual has opportunities to thrive, achieve and develop. We view equality and diversity as assets, and we welcome all applicants.

Shortlists may be prepared with the candidates that have been selected for a detailed academic assessment. A committee set up by the head of school is responsible for selecting the most qualified candidates. See this link for further information about shortlisting at the Faculty of Arts: shortlisting

Aarhus University offers a broad variety of services for international researchers and accompanying families, including relocation service and career counselling to expat partners: <http://ias.au.dk/au-relocation-service/>. Please find more information about entering and working in Denmark here: <http://international.au.dk/research/>

Faculty of Arts

The Faculty of Arts is one of five main academic areas at Aarhus University.

The faculty contributes to Aarhus University's research, talent development, knowledge exchange and degree programmes.

With its 550 academic staff members, 240 PhD students, 9,500 BA and MA students, and 1,500 students following continuing/further education programmes, the faculty constitutes a strong and diverse research and teaching environment.

The Faculty of Arts consists of the School of Communication and Culture, the School of Culture and Society and the Danish School of Education. Each of these units has strong academic environments and forms the basis for interdisciplinary research and education.

The faculty's academic environments and degree programmes engage in international collaboration and share the common goal of contributing to the development of knowledge, welfare and culture in interaction with society.

Read more at <https://international.au.dk/>

The application must be submitted via Aarhus University's recruitment system, which can be accessed under the job advertisement on Aarhus University's website.

Aarhus University

Aarhus University is an academically diverse and research-intensive university with a strong commitment to high-quality research and education and the development of society nationally and globally. The university offers an inspiring research and teaching environment to its 38,000 students (FTEs) and 8,300 employees, and has an annual revenues of EUR 935 million. Learn more at www.international.au.dk/